The International Conference center of Lead City University was the venue of a Special Roundtable Conference that was held in commemoration and in honour of a handbook on Freedom for Nigerian Nationalists written by Honourable ADEGOKE ADELABU – AFRICA IN EBULLITION. The event was in conjunction with the Olusola Sanu Center for Euro-African Studies, Lead City University (LCU-CEAS) and The Ibadan School of Government and Public Policy.

The event which took place on Wednesday 18th November pulled together technocrats, politicians, academicians, lecturers, staff of the University and students across all levels to discuss the contributions and proposed roadmap for the actualization of a better Nigeria. In his welcome address, the Vice-Chancellor of the University, Prof. Kabir Adeyemo set the stage by informing the audience that Lead City University is opened to profitable scholarly endeavours and that was what informed the collaboration that brought about the roundtable Conference. He reiterated that, “LCU is an ideal place for modern learning: a great institution with exemplary achievements.”

Various Speakers dissected the book: AFRICA IN EBULLITION, by analyzing each chapter in relation to where the Nation currently is and its quest to achieve a better Nigeria. Their collective call to the students was to be ardent readers, and lovers of history, with an encouragement for all and sundry to join politics and not leave the fate of the nation's destiny in the hands of do or die politicians, if we all yarn for a greater Nigeria.

During the interactive session, students expressed pleasure at the recognition and accolades that were given to the “SORO SOKE” generation and their gallantry and unforgettable 2020 protest to demand for a better Nigeria.

The event was also graced by the Pro-Chancellor, Prof. Jide Owoeye, the Registrar, Dr. (Mrs) Bola Ayeni, the Director of Communications and Student Services, Dr. Ayobami Owolabi, Deans, Senior Scholars and friends of the university from within and outside the University.
